PREACHING TO THE CHOIR

Many of you will have already joined CFA on Consumer Connect for our weekly sessions on CF and COVID-19. We can certainly look back on the tension and uncertainty of the early pandemic phase and congratulate ourselves on coming such a long way.

We know a lot more about the interactions of CF and COVID-19 from observing cases internationally and we know a lot more about what the curve will look like in Australia due to the nation's successes in Quarantine and Social Distancing.

Human beings are capable of getting used to anything and maybe we have even got used to the new normal of work-from-home and online "get togethers".

But this is not the time to lose focus on important issues. I'm sure you've heard me say that before and it remains true. Healthcare equality is a struggle and we need to remain informed and poised. Our online webinars have become a weekly highlight for the staff at CFA and we have had great feedback from you guys too. Of course, we are staying 'on topic' and that means that most of our experts will have some relation to the COVID-19 crisis, but even that is a broad spectrum from CF Dietary experts to celebrated virologists.

This week we are proud to welcome John Wilson from the Alfred Hospital Melbourne and Tonia Douglas from the Queensland Children's Hospital onto the panel.

We will go live with our experts on Wednesday the 29th of April at 6:00pm. In-depth discussions like these can help all of us stay on top of CF issues in this troubled time.
