14TH AUSTRALASIAN CYSTIC FIBROSIS CONFERENCE

Most problems are problems of perspective. Some problems are not. We have the burden and privilege of fighting for a cause that is real and tangible and immediate. We know that a victory with the PBAC or an increase in CF Centre funding will be a direct road to saving lives and alleviating suffering.

But even with such a clear course to steer, it is still easy to lose perspective. We can lose track of how far we've come.

We can lose sight of lessons from the past.

We can lose our sense of the collective and come to feel that we are fighting alone.

The 14th Australasian Cystic Fibrosis Conference (ACFC) will be held this August (7th to the 8th) in a combined digital/in-person format.

The Conference has always been about regaining this perspective. Spend a few hours or a couple of days talking and listening to fellow experts, advocates and community members and you cannot help but be changed and galvanised for the road ahead.

Our decision to host these Conferences only every two years keeps these events fresh and practical, but it also means that CFA can benefit from regular course correction – letting us know what the Lay community currently needs and what the Medical community has in the pipeline.

The 14th ACFC is about you. You have something to contribute to the course we are steering.

You have a perspective. And we want you to have all the tools, information and allies we can muster for you to make you more effective at pursuing this important cause.

Join us online or in-person and help us solve some problems of perspective.
